Analostans and Columbias Appear With Their Rivals.

TIGHT FINISHES THE RULE

Most Successful Affair in Recent Years - Splendid Exhibitions of Amateur Carsmanship-"Blue and White" Lost the Junior Event and the "Winged Arrow" Landed th One for "Mixed" Eights,

The regatta hold by the Potomac Boat Club yesterday afternoon will go down in long and honorable history as one of the nost successful given under its auspices Not only were the events well contested but they were promptly started, and the ast event was finished at the time at which, in other regattas, the start for the closing race is made. All this reflects credit upon the able management of Capt. Joe Bradley and Lieut. Harvey Blunt, who worked tard for the successful carrying out of the program, before and during the regatta. There were no upacts, no fouls nor interference from leasure boats or craft of any kind. The pourse was kept clear, and the best

The weather conditions were nearly

The weather conditions were nearly perfect, and the elements behaved their very best. The big balcony of the boathlouse was crowded to the limit, and the tower windows, too, were filled. The club's fair friends, in their prettlest gowns, were present in large numbers, and their enthusiastic and impartial applause and encouragement inspired the perspiring carsinen to do their level best. The balcony was a perfect beauty hower, and the river, with its countless craft, from the single outrigger to the more awkward Whiteball, nearly all filled with fair freight, was a moving panorama which is on view only on regatta days. The Columbia boathouse had a large trowd, and the wharves between the houses were filled with spectators. The big bridge, too, was lined with admirers of the sport. Puffing up and down the river was the Bartholdi, carrying the officials and a few invited friends. A band cials and a few invited friends. A band ficials and a few invited friends. A band on the balcony played during the races, after which there was dancing. The four-oared and single and double faces, which were part of the program, were not rowed because of the darkness, which was fast setting in after the last eight-oared race was finished. The eight-oared races were a mile straightaway and started in front of the Three Sisters and finished in front of the boutbouse.

This year th. regatta was made the more interesting by the fact that the An-alestans and Columbias each had in an alestans and Columbias each had in an hight for a friendly race in junior and mixed classes, respectively, with the Po-tomacs. The Analostans lost their event by a half length, and the Columbias flowned their old-time rivals of the "red and white" by about the same distance. J. Holdsworth Gordon officiated as ref-ters for the first race, and then Louis A. Pischer took up the responsible duties

The first event was for junior eight-oarsed crews from the Analostan and Potomac Boat Clubs. They faced the starter with the Analostans on the Virginia side and the Potomacs on the District shore. Both got away to a good start, the Analostans rowing a quick stroke, which they kept up throughout, the Potomacs rowing a steady swing, which was more effective in its results. The latter throughout rowed ensy and well within themselves and won by a half length. themselves and won by a half length

Their watermanship was frequently and favorably commented on.

To the bridge it was a pretty race, with the Petomacs in the lead, and the first under and out by a quarter of a length. A hundred yards away No. 4 of the leadquick to pick up and almost closed the gap. At the flour mill both crews steered out of their courses, but keeping their felative positions. At the C. A. C. house the Potomacs spurred and increased their lend, with the blue and white pulling cample, though but their source which was gamely along but their spurt which was called for too late, availed but little, and the Potomacs crossed the line a half length ahead. It was alp and tuck to the bridge, from under which the heavies showed five feet ahead. At the mill, the crews were on even terms and it was a tight were and anybody's victory, but just when all hands were settling down for a spurt, No. 6 in young Doyle's crew, caught a crab and lost all chance of winning, though they gamely picked it

Then came the third and last race. It was between the Columbia and Potomac "mixed" eights. The Columbias put in their crew through the coursesy of Lieut. Hecox, to fill the event, taking the place of the Analostans, who found it impossible to get out a strong crew, because of the Analostans, who found it impossible to get out a strong crew, because of the absence from the city of several of the members. The Columbias won, and with it came the surprise of the day, for the crew was put in on very short notice. The crew rowed a stroke which is distinctly Hecox's stroke, and that it is a good one was demonstrated by the result. The Potomac crew is a very strong one, but it showed its lack of practice and its failure to win was parily due to the fact that some of the men had rowed in the two preceding races. The crews rowed side by side nearly to the bridge, when the Columbias forged ahead and came from under the bridge nearly a length to the good. At the ice-house the Potomacs put on some steam and cut down the lead one-half. At the C. A. C. house both spurted and kept it up to the finish, but the Columbias kept in the lead and finished a scant quarter length to the good, and the very successful regard was finished.
